

Remorse, as we know it, should be more often regarded as chagrin. Remorse is spontaneous and comes whether punishment is inflicted or not.

THE TRUSTEES MEETING

BRAND PROPERTY OWNERS REMONSTRATE AGAINST ASPHALT PAVEMENT

ORDINANCES PASSED

Trustees Grant Postponement of Two Weeks

The regular meeting of the Trustees was held last Thursday night, all members except Conrad being present.

The question of the improvement of Brand boulevard was subjected to quite a lengthy discussion by the residents of the streets. Led by Hal Davenport. Quite a contingent asked that the Trustees hold up the order for the improving of the street with asphalt until the residents could ascertain whether a less costly pavement, but yet a serviceable one, could be secured. The Trustees granted a two weeks' postponement on the matter, at which time they will listen to any suggestions that the property owners may have to make.

At the previous meetings when the question of improving Brand was taken up, it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that asphalt was the class of pavement that was wanted. Since this remonstrance, it has developed that the residents are pretty nearly evenly divided on the question, and the Trustees are in quite a quandary as to the course that they will pursue.

It is understood that those who formed the opposition to the asphalt will hold a mass meeting sometime during the week, at which time they expect to get all of the property owners together and learn their wishes.

A communication from the League of California Municipalities in which they called attention of the Trustees to the fact that all city employees must be protected in case of injury or death, by the city, was read. According to this information, the Employers' Liability Act requires that the city shall carry accident and death insurance on every municipal employee.

City Clerk Street was instructed to send in a report of all the employees and their salary, and to determine the course that they would be required to pursue.

An ordinance licensing certain kinds of business, and refusing to permit soothsayers, fortune-tellers and mediums the right to maintain offices, was given for final reading and adopted.

An ordinance prohibiting the throwing of garbage and waste papers in the street was also given its final reading and adopted.

The following bills were approved and ordered paid:

Jennings and Bettin, $3.32.
Southern Cal. Gas Co., $1.68.
C. L. Jennings, $44.96.
S. M. Street, $5.05.

JUDGE MELROSE PULLS DOUBLE-HEADER

Two marriages on the first day of the year gave the justice's office an impetus which, if carried out, would entitle Judge Melrose to the kingdom of Cupid.

Both couples were from Los Angeles, and all are connected with motion picture theaters. The men are motion picture operators and the young women are cashiers of the respective theaters in which the men are employed.

The first that Judge Melrose knew of the scheme was obtained when they phoned about eleven o'clock New Year's day and asked if he would be ready to marry two couples at noon.

"Sure come ahead," answered the Judge.

The couples admitted that while they had been considering the question of matrimony for some time, they had not contemplated taking the step soon. Someone suggested that they start the new year right. It was done.

The names of the young people are as follows: D. S. Mitchell, Mabel Kecker, and Harry Dodge to Hazel Rush.

PYTHIAN SISTERS LODGE

KNIGHTS AND LADIES INSTAL NEW OFFICERS MONDAY NIGHT

LODGE IS GROWING

Optimistic Talks and Banquet Complete Happy Evening

Pre-eminent in the years events of the Knights of Pythias and of the Pythian Sisters, was the installation of the incoming officers of both orders, which was held in the K. P. hall Monday night. Fully two hundred members and visitors filled the spacious hall to overflowing, taking part or witnessing the pretty ceremonies, and afterward entering in the spirit of fellowship at a banquet, that closed the happy evening at midnight.

Never in the histories of the local organizations has such a number of members and visitors been congregated in the hall attending a purely lodge meeting. Now only did practically all of the members of the lodges attend, but visitors from Los Angeles and Glendale orders were generously sprinkled among the crowd. The growth of the two orders was clearly indexed by the numbers, the spirit of the growth was shown by the feeling that permeated the very atmosphere—a spirit of get-together-and-boost.

This feeling was manifest before the room was over half filled, and, as the hours lengthened toward the closing hour, every moment showed an increase. Talks, buoyant and filled with wholesome optimism, chuck-a-block with progressiveness, were given by many of the members and visitors.

The installations were impressive. The Pythian Sisters, following their beautiful ritual installed in a manner that surprised and pleased all. Simple yet effective, their work was an inspiration. In the installation ceremonies T. I. Gillespie was presented with the Past Chancellor's jewel. The officers installed were:

Wayne Frank, Chancellor Commander.
Denzil S. Jennings, Vice-Chancellor.
Ralph S. Robinson, Prelate.
Jonas W. Gould, Master of Work.
Frank H. Davis, Keeper of Records and Seals.
Charles C. Hapgood, Master of Finances.
Earl V. Coleman, Master of Exchequer.
C. E. Nicholson, Inner Guard.
Charles L. Jennings, Outer Guard.
Trustee, James Reh.

The installing officers of the Knights were:

A. T. Davis, Deputy Grand Chancellor.
W. J. Hibbard, Deputy Grand Prelate.

George Dodson, Deputy Grand Master-at-Arms.

The officers of the Pythian Sisters installed for the coming year are:

Florence A. Cook, Past Chief.
Anna Marek, Most Excellent Chief.
Alma Dutton, Excellent Senior.
Mae Burlingham, Excellent Junior.

Minnie McAdams, Manager of the Temple.
Margaret R. Coleman, Mistress of Records and Correspondence.
Susie M. Peck, Mistress of Finance.

Nettie Laird, Protector of the Temple.
Hattie Tiffany, Guard of Outer Temple.

The installing officers of the Pythian Sisters were:

Mrs. Cable, Acting Grand Chief.
Mrs. Maud Sullivan, Grand Senior Chief.

Mrs. Ruth Abbot, Grand Manager.
Mrs. Addie Davis, Mistress of Ceremony.

Among the visitors attending the ceremonies were: Pythian Sisters Spear, Hough, Davis, Miskle and Willets of Los Angeles and Willets of Glendale, Knights Hough, Spear of Los Angeles and Peters and Dutton of Glendale.

'ORRIBLE! MARRIED MEN ATTEND STAG

Last Saturday evening Bob Oliver gave a stag party. (We mean just what we say, "Bob," and not Robert.) It must be understood that as Robert he would give a musical recital, or a benefit for the preservation of the works of Gama Gama, but even in ones wildest moments, can one imagine a man called Robert giving a stag. No, it was Bob.

As we said before, Bob Oliver gave a stag party. Gave it openly; yes, even announced it with luridly colored invitations depicting a stag with head erect, pawing the ground. Still further, he declared his intention of making the party of great interest, and one to which all were invited early and expected to stay early.

Needless to say, everyone came. Yep, even the married ones came, forsaking their firesides, children, wives and other accessories, and resolved that for one evening they would be real devilish.

Some people who were there would have you to understand that the married men were the worse. But we want to know, how could they, seeing that they are out of practice. No, we don't think that they were worse. They may have tried harder, we will agree to that, but as for their being worse, no, never.

There isn't a whole lot to be said about the party itself. Every one came early and everybody stayed early, and we guess that that is about all there is to say—oh, yes, listen to this: They all got home, yep, ever bloomin' one of them. Sort of knocks the little pictures every one had sketched with the pencil of imagination, but we must be truthful (as we must be), so we add that the little firesides, babies, wives et cetera had their husbands returned to them and the young bucks were taken back by their apartments.

Here's who were there: Wayne Frank, Ferdinand Rigal, H. Starr, Louis Leonard, A. J. Van Wie, G. E. Leonard, Nick Veslich and Al Vaulet.

THE TROPICO CHURCHES

There has been a great deal said of business enterprises and home building in Tropic, but the churches have been busy, too. The new Methodist Episcopal church building is a very attractive structure and is almost completed. The Presbyterian church also is planning for an addition to the present building, which will be adapted to up-to-date work along religious and social lines.

A meeting will be held by the Presbyterians on Monday evening, January 12th, at 7:30, to consider a proposition of the Board of Church Extension, to loan money for enlarging the building.

At the Presbyterian church next Sabbath morning, 11:00 o'clock, the pastor, Rev. C. Blanchard Hatch, will preach. The subject will be "Queen Esther, and the Old Jewish Religion." In the evening, at 7:30 o'clock, his subject will be "Damages, Who Pays Them?" The girls' choir, Mrs. Wayland Brown, director, will sing at both services.

ATTENTION, GIRLS

The Tropic ball team will give battle to an aggregation from Los Angeles, who fly under the caption of Burke Bros. Batchelors. Sounds rather interesting, doesn't it?

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Specht of Lancaster are visiting a few days with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Nicholson at 327 Acacia avenue.

AUTO-THIEVES GET BUSY

THIEVES PILFER MACHINE WHILE OWNER PAYS NEW YEAR'S CALL

Can of Sauerkraut Gets Impatient at Long Ride

To have one's auto stolen at eight o'clock one evening, to have it driven 75 miles and finally to find it within half a mile of your door on the following morning, are the experiences of W. E. Burke, all of which occurred New Year's night.

Whether to be real peeved or whether to be filled with the little joybuds, is what Burke is now trying to decide. That is, he isn't hankering after anyone's coming and taking his machine out for a little spin over all sorts of roads, especially just when he wants to drive it himself, but at the same time he can't help but feel a little bit of gratitude to the man that brought it as near back home as possible without betraying himself. Thus it is that "torn by two conflicting emotions" (see Chambers, Robert J.), Burke never gazes at the little machine but he starts to belch forth a few sulphuric terse sentences describing the robbers, only to lapse in to a smile as he reassures himself that he really has the car back in his possession.

Burke and family went to pay the New Year's greetings to O. P. Martin. Leaving the car to amuse itself as best it could with the curb and the scenery, the Burkes stepped into the house. Returning shortly, the car was nowhere to be seen. The police were notified.

The following morning it was found standing contentedly in the road at the corner of Dunbarton and Vine streets, and was promptly taken into custody. Nothing in the car had been molested. A grip and a can of sauerkraut were in the back seat as they had been left, except that during the night the contents of the can became desirous of seeing a little of the journey and burst its holding. The result was that sauerkraut was everywhere in evidence.

Some muddy footprints on the dash showed plainly that two men had taken the car. The speedometer showed that they had taken it for some 75 miles. The where and whyfore is left for conjecture, and for Billy Gould to find out.

THE MISSION PLAY AT THE AUDITORIUM

If there is anything that is indicative of this wondrous country, it is the story of the Missions that John Steven McGroarty has spread before us in his pageant-drama. The narration of the times depicted is fraught with deepest poetry, romance and beauty from the beginning to the fall of the Franciscan missions in California. It took over three years from the early conception of the idea until the finished play was turned out and produced at San Gabriel two years ago, and it is extraordinary that all the literary ferret failed even to strike a scent of its story with its glamorous romance, its thrill and its glory.

Anxious to give an appropriate setting for this play, Mr. McGroarty selected that almost dead and forgotten abode bourn of San Gabriel, and it was his intention that the play should never leave the locality for which it was designed, and in which it was first presented, but the people of Los Angeles said he was selfish in keeping the play always at San Gabriel; that Father Junipero Serra had as much to do with building the Los Angeles mission, or that of San Diego or Santa Barbara as he did with San Gabriel, and so with many demands from the local play-goers, or those who live in other directions and are compelled to make a

GREYS LOSE ANOTHER

NUMEROUS ERRORS LOSES GAME FOR TROPICO TO GLENDALE

GLENDALE IS VICTOR

After Two Months Lay-off Rice Pitches Brilliant Game

Errors by the flock, by the drove, by the bunch or however errors come, completely took hold of the Tropico nine last Sunday, benumbing their legs, paralyzing their hands and in fact threw a blanket of inaction over the entire crew, and allowed the Glendale artists to take the game by a score of 8 to 1.

It is hard to say just how many errors were made, the scorekeeper being limited to one sheet of paper, and not feeling particularly swift in arithmetic, lost count a little after the first inning. He does know that in that first frame the Glendale boys made three runs without a hit, which in the way of record for such a performance, is not so worse. It is closely rivaled, though, by the results of the game—out of ten hits they made eight runs.

Jay Rice, who has been keeping his throwing arm to other work, came back into the game at a good clip, twirling some fine ball. Ten strikeouts are to his credit as against Bidwell's 8. Had he been given any support the score should have been about 3 to 4 in Glendale's favor, or a tie. Again we use this word "if" a lot, when manufacturing alibis for our team. If the team had just stretched themselves on the bases once in a while they might have had more than one run to show for their eight hits.

Teamwork won for Glendale. All right, so be it. We intend to learn what that word means sometime, and then look out. We already have the individual players.

NOTICE

Every citizen of Tropic is invited to use the columns of this paper, and you are urged to do so. All articles must be in this office not later than Tuesday and must bear signature of writer.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

On the heels of the announcement of last issue, to the effect that the Sentinel would be under a new management, comes another. This time it is for us to announce that Mr. H. L. Edwards has disposed of his interests in the paper to Mrs. Ella W. Richardson, who will in the future guide its course. Mr. A. J. Van Wie, who has had practical management of the paper since last May, will continue to act in that capacity, endeavoring to make the Sentinel more deserving of support in each succeeding issue.

The Sentinel has always been a success. It has not been as great a success as it might have been had conditions been more favorable. But inasmuch as these things are now at our backs, we are concerned alone with the future.

We are certain that in Tropic there is a field for a broad-gauged paper—a paper that will not stoop to pettiness or bickerings, but one that will offer a forum for the people in and through which they may be given an opportunity to express their ideas and desires. This is our conception of the field. We ask that every citizen in this city shall feel that he is directly responsible for the success of the Sentinel, for it is for every citizen in Tropic that it is published. Without this feeling the success of the paper will be that much impaired.

With these few words, we begin on the new regime. We will try and improve the paper at every opportunity. Even further, we ask that any one who has suggestions to make that will tend to make the Sentinel a more representative paper of Tropic, that he shall feel it his duty to let us know his ideas. We want to give you more local news and in a better style. We want to have articles in which all are interested, and above all, we want to be broad enough to compass the boundaries of the needs of the people who live here—not just a few of them, but all.

To that end we ask the help of all.

A GOOD MEASURE

The bill denying people who cannot read or write admittance into the United States will, we presume, become a law soon. The reason given is that such people are undesirable additions to our population. One good way to judge some things is to push them to the limit and see where they lead to. Of course, if such immigrants would be undesirable, then those who cannot read and write, who are already here, should be deported.

Would that help our country materially? We published a few weeks ago the story of a woman who opened a free night school in the mountains of eastern Kentucky for adults, who, when young, were denied schooling.

The response was something most touching. Old men and women came. The rigors of the elements counted for nothing with them. They came on foot through the cold; they waded swollen streams, and the reasons some of them gave were pitiable. An old lady wanted to be able to read the letters of an absent son and to be able to write to him. Business men wanted to be able to keep their accounts; the majority wanted to be able to read their bibles.

It is not those who cannot read and write who make trouble, but those who, with educations, misuse their gifts. We hope President Wilson will imitate ex-President Taft and kill the measure.—Goodwin's Weekly.

STREET CAR RIDERS, SALT, BASEBALL

Everyone has heard of the woman who expended ten cents in our fare to purchase a half yard of silk that was marked down from 15 cents to 14½, and have laughed at the inconsistency shown. It is characteristic of the human race to laugh at an exaggeration, but to miss the application. Certainly they would not do anything as foolish as the woman. They happen to be just a little more farsighted, but in proportion to their light they list to the lure of the penny, nickel or quarter, as the case may be, with just as much credulity and they follow it just as far.

In just plain words, there are any number of people that believe and follow just what they can see. The needs of tomorrow night as well as the needs of twenty years in the future; the interests of the community of which they are a part might just as well be the interests of the inhabitants of Pekin.

These people look past the merchants of San Fernando street, take their little ten cents, board a car, spend several hours in hunting a bargain (we question if such a thing exists), and return to Tropic to do a little sleeping. Sometimes they buy a little salt, a spool of thread and a dime's worth of lard. Buy it, not to help out the home merchant, mind you, but just because they haven't the time to make the trip to the city.

If these people should some day find that the little stores of our city were closed, the wails and lamentations that would go up would equal the din of a fiasco in Hades. Why, some of them honestly believe that they have a community interest.

Then maybe one day the ball team wants to buy new suits. All right, easiest thing in the world, you know. Mr. Car Rider grabs on to a legal-looking document, traverses the main stem and secures the necessary amount. We wonder if he ever stops to think that the profit that the storekeeper makes from his salt, thread, etc., wouldn't buy the dye to color the monogram on his ball shirt.

Mr. Car Rider, you are living here, you are one of us, we are going to watch you play ball and chip in once and awhile, but please remember we have a little interest of our own. Wolves, bad as they are, observe the laws of the pack. We don't want to see the look on your face after you have tried to raise support to the club in Los Angeles. We like you too well for that. So please remember that we all live together and we all have laughed at the woman and the half-cent saving.

THE COMMON PEOPLE

Where the phrase came from is a mystery. It has been used and re-used, spoken and written so often and so frequent that it has long since become a meaningless term. Most of us deny the implication to ourselves—very, very few of us are proud of it. Common people, probably means, just the rank and file, the masses as one finds them when he walks down the street, eats his meal or the ones with whom he conducts his business. They are just the normal people. Adam and Eve of today, they might be called. Unpretentious every day folk; folk who have found their little path and can be found walking it, firmly and in a matter of fact manner.

Lincoln remarked that God must have loved common people or he would not have made so many of them. He only directly made two, and as suggested before, they were common enough. They had as characteristics just a normal amount of all things. They were not murderers, nor were they Edisons; not scandal mongers, nor yet Shakespeares; not Judases, nor again Washingtons. Yes, evidently God placed a whole lot of confidence in those two people who would cause no more comment if they lived among the millions today than you or I.

The great Wisdom Head could possibly force the result of a nation of unnormal persons. Throw together in one box six of the type mentioned above and ask them to live together, and the result would be interesting. Put six common people together, be they of that many different nationalities; they would accommodate themselves to the conditions.

All of the geniuses or devils have been reproductions through man's evolution. Certain conditions and environments produce certain results, and that is the accounting for their presence. So a genius or a devil is a man directed product of twisted Divine material. As a general rule we need about 50 common people to keep them on an average.

We do not contend that there is no bad in the common man. Oh, no; far from it. We do contend that, while there is bad, that there is more good. We contend that he is normal. A normal man, according to our idea, does not lie for the simple reason that he doesn't want to. It isn't because he is afraid to. He doesn't steal because he sees a convict suit, but because stealing is foreign to his nature. He doesn't gloat over the number of murders that some person commits, because it is just against his grain. Such is a common man from the inside.

From the outside, he is the practical, placid individual who hobs up at an accident with a kindness that is astounding, that is doing some little kindness or foregoing some doubtful work or amusement. Those are his exterior traits of character and the ones that mark him. They are the growths of his thoughts.

Back again to the effect of the common man on the whole of mankind, we need scarcely to say that he is the great safety valve of the world. He is the water that tempers the ideas that come sizzling hot from the red-haired un-normalities. As long as he exists we may be sure that all will go well—he wouldn't let them go any other way. He is the brains that discards or absorbs as it appeals to the greater good. We call him dunce and slow, but we—oh—my—oh, what would become of the world if he should disappear?

Some one decries the fact that geniuses are growing fewer in number; rather should he decrie the possibility that we should lose our common people.

SHOULDN'T STAND HITCHED

The hide-bound press of the east is lambasting Postmaster General Burleson for his views on government ownership. Notable among such papers is the New York World, which, notwithstanding its "on-again-off-again" experience in the Sulzer matter, is trying hard to be a democratic organ, despite what conscience it may have.

"Government ownership of telegraph and telephone lines," says the World, "is no policy of the democratic party. It never was a policy of the democratic party."

Who cares what is or what has been the policy of the democratic party? The democratic party was not intrusted with power last year because it was the democratic party. In fact, the majority of the people did not vote the democratic ticket.

A lot of good things never were and are not the announced policy of the democratic party, but that is no reason why the democratic party should stand permanently hitched to a post, perpetually relying upon the same old bucket of molding oats for continued existence.

In passage of the tariff and currency acts the democratic administration has put symptoms of constructiveness, progressivism and positivism in the democratic party, but it can no more live forever on that than can the republican party live on its policies toward such issues as slavery, high protection and gold standard. The people do not pause long over the business of merely rewarding parties for their performance of duty or fulfillment of pledges.

The democratic party will surely deserve the donkey as its "symbol" if it imagines that all it has to do now is to calmly consume oats and keep its tail and ears going to ward off the flies.

The telegraph and telephone companies have monopolized the gouged. There must be a remedy for it, and the member of the cabinet who suggests one should be praised, not abused because his little old party hasn't made any suggestion.—The Record.

A dinner party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Todd, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Craig, Mr. and Mrs. William Hough and Miss Mabel Todd was given by the former at their home on Glendale avenue on New Year's day.

After the surfeit of "problem plays" and productions featuring the careers of Birds of Paradise Lost, it is pleasing to note the return to the plays of real worth.

"The Little Rebel," at the Burbank theater last week, attracted a large number of Tropicans. Among those who attended were:

Mesdames Stella Spear, Alina Dutton, Delia Hapgood, Susie Spear and Hattie Tiffany, all officers of N. P. Banks W. R. C.

dances and four extras. The dancing was so timed so that intermission would come at eleven forty-five.

It being a "rag" dance, there were twice as many two steps as waltzes but the waltzes were all moonlights.

The crowd, as a crowd, was one of the best that ever turned out for a dance in the town, everybody was there to have the time of their life, and from all appearances they did, even when the dance broke up at 3, some were loath to go.

The Elks were having a dance in Butler's hall, so when their dance was over they came over to the Senior dance and added to the merry throng.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

The hearts of the members of N. P. Banks Post, G. A. R., were deeply moved by the departure of three of our highly esteemed comrades within six days, namely, Comrade J. P. Biggs, Comrade L. W. Adams, Comrade B. F. Forre. We feel that death has demanded a very heavy toll of us as a Post in the removal of these beloved comrades in so short a time. We feel very keenly our loss, but rejoice in the hope of a glorious immortality. Our comrades are not dead, only transferred to the land where no sickness or death is ever experienced. Our hope is that we who remain may be true to every principal for which they so nobly contended. Comrades, when we are mustered out, may it be said of us "We have fought a good fight, we have finished our course, and be given a welcome into that land where no war is. We do hereby express our most tender sympathy and ardent love for the members of the homes from which our comrades have gone to come back no more. We stand ready to render any service possible to us that the bereaved may be helped and comforted. We commend the sorrowing ones to the love and protection of the All-Father, who has said "Lo, I am with you always."

Comrade W. B. Pratt,
Comrade B. Lovell,
Comrade C. R. Norton.

PEOPLE'S CONCERT PROGRAM

Handel's "Messiah" was given last Sunday for the second time in Los Angeles to a well filled house. Such a performance as was given is a great credit to any organization, and to any city which possesses such an organization.

The chorus and orchestral work was excellent and the soloists were the best obtainable. Those who took the solo parts were Mrs. Catherine Shank, soprano; Mrs. Minnie Hance, contralto; Roland Paul, tenor, and Gage Christopher, bass. Of the singers, Mrs. Shank is known better in Glendale and Tropico than the others, and her fellow-citizens are her very enthusiastic admirers. Though Mrs. Shank has enjoyed the best of musical advantages, both at home and abroad, she never makes her hearers conscious of her years of study as her singing has all of the freedom and joyousness of the caroling of a bird. Her enunciation, too, is very nearly perfect. "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" she sang with such feeling and assurance that she made her audience also know that He lives.

An excellent program is arranged for next Sunday. The piano solo by Mr. Alfred Butler will be a very interesting number. An overture by von Weber, Hungarian Dances by Brahms, "A La Bien-Aime," by Schmetz, Herbert's "Pan-American," and a selection from Lohengrin with popular selections for encores will make up the rest of the program.

REGISTRATION ON

Every Voter Must Register or Lose Vote

Everyone who wants to vote in 1914 must register.

All registrations expired on December 31 and everyone must record his or her name if he wishes to vote.

It does not make any difference if you registered on the last day of the old year; you must re-register in 1914 if you wish to vote at any election after April 1, next.

If you are on the great register and have not moved you could vote at any election held prior to April 1, whether you re-register or not. But at any election after April 1 a brand new registration will be necessary.

There have been no material changes made in the registration law since last year. The form of affidavit is somewhat different but the questions asked are the same. One slight difference is that now each woman registering must sign her name as "Miss" or "Mrs." as the case may be. Herebefore the name only without prefix was necessary.

A decided innovation which, however, is not required by law, is the plan of giving the registered voter a copy of his registration. The new blanks have two stubs attached. One of these is to be torn out and given to the voter. He should preserve this and take it with him to the polls.

Then, if by any mistake his affidavit of registration is not at the polling place the stub will be practically as good and it is understood that the elector will be allowed to vote if he presents this stub and appears to be otherwise eligible. In addition when a voter desires to transfer he must return this stub to the registration office before he is allowed to transfer, so it must not be lost. Further, if the voter's affidavit does not appear in the poll list where it should it can be easily traced by aid of the stub which contains the number of the affidavit, date and other information.

Register early and then you will not forget it.

City Clerk Street, at the City Hall, is registration deputy, and will be at the City Hall daily between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

The voter can, of course, register with any deputy in the county but it is always advisable to register near home, as there is less danger of mistakes in giving precinct, street, etc.

AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

An exceptionally enjoyable evening commemorative of the birthday of the host, was spent by a large number of friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hibbert at "Sotoyona," his residence on Brand boulevard, Saturday.

A program of unusual merit was rendered and games and amusements of pleasing quality kept the guests at all times in a state of pleasant expectancy.

Instrumental music by Mrs. Don Erskine and Scotch ballads rendered in a clear tenor by Mr. F. Booth were enthusiastically received. A touch of mysticism was added by Messrs. Hibbert and Jack Statthen in a remarkable demonstration of mental telepathy and of the subservience of a mind to a stronger mind. This feature consisted of the finding of hidden coins by Mr. Statthen while blindfolded and acting under the mental suggestion of Mr. Hibbert and remarkable semicataleptic periods entered into by Mr. Statthen at the will of Mr. Hibbert concluded the evening's enjoyment.

Refreshments of a highly enjoyable quality were served.

After felicitating the host the guests departed, thoroughly pleased with the evening.

In addition to the host and hostess, those in attendance were: Misses Ann Mockley, Pauline Le Cam, Dorothy Erskine, Leonard Hibbert, Florence Trulock, Dora Hewitt, Bertha Wahl, Lizzie Fisher; Messrs. Walter Hibbert, Jack Statthen, Frank Johnson, E. L. Young, Harold Becker, C. C. Holt, Van Cooper; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. F. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest College, Mr. and Mrs. Don Erskine.

WATCH MEETING

Some seventy-five members of the Woman's Relief Corps, G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans, gathered at the G. A. R. hall last Wednesday evening to watch the passing of 1913 and welcome young 1914. 'Twas a jolly crowd and the evening passed quickly with games, songs and frivolity. At the stroke of 12 the party sang America and a salute to the flag ushered the youngster, 1914, to a prosperous year.

WAR AND WHISKEY

War was fittingly described by General Sherman, but in spite of his graphic, if abbreviated characterization, war is a healthy diversion compared to the death and devastation scattered through the world by the liquor traffic.

Taking the best government reports available, it is proved that 720,000 deaths occur annually in this country alone that can be laid directly at the door of whiskey-drinking.

In all the wars of the world, from 500 years before Christ down to and including the recent Russo-Japanese war, there had been killed in battle a total of only 700,000.

War killed 700,000 in 2300 years, whiskey kills 720,000 every year. It is almost unbelievable! Yet many people object to interfering with personal liberty and the liquor traffic!—Highland Park Herald.

FIRE TRUCK NEARING COMPLETION

According to the latest word received, Tropico will have their new fire truck before it was promised, or before March 15.

City Clerk Street received word from the Knov factory Monday that the assembling of the machine was being pushed rapidly and that they expected to make delivery sooner than they had promised the Trustees when they obtained the contract.

The truck is a three-way fighter and is equipped as a chemical, a hose carried and a hook and ladder truck. Compactness is the keynote of the rig, and when completed Tropico will have one of the most efficient fire-fighting apparatus in this territory.

A TRIBUTE TO THE COW

Most potent of all single influences in the building of this, the mightiest nation in history, is the cow. Her sons drew the plows which first cultivated the land of the new world, hauled to market the products of the field, and with slow energy, moved the chattels and household goods beyond the mountains to new homes in the farther west.

They supplied the beef which is the food of the Anglo-Saxon, a race that was never conquered since history began. They furnished the shoes of the pioneers who trod the unknown wilds and made of them the farmsteads and cities of our present enlightenment. They gave the clothes and robes to protect the pioneer against the destroying blasts of winter and made commerce possible before the railroad was. They covered the chair upon which he sat, filled the mattress upon which he slept and glued the furniture which he used.

The old cow is mother of the whole bovine race and foster mother of half the human race. From the roadside weed she manufactures the most nourishing of human foods. She is the ready aid of the farmer, the pet of the rich man, and the ever-present help of the poor. She is the economist of the people and the conservator of their resources. She partakes of the grass of the field and leaves the farm the richer for her presence.

As she helped to develop the farm from the wilderness and as she ate of its first fruits, so she will renew the life of the soil and make a still greater agriculture possible.

In all our history the cow has been man's closest friend and benefactor. Upon her products are built the great business interests which center in the stockyards, the creameries, the shoe factories, the harness shops, and the mills.

Take away the cow and our banks would close, our graveyards yawn, and the wheels of commerce would cease to turn. Foster and care for her and business flourishes, the fertility of the soil is conserved, and she becomes the custodian of the nation's prosperity.—I. D. Graham, in Pacific Dairy Review.

BOUILLON CUBES

THE Department of Agriculture in a bulletin just issued makes a wholesale condemnation of bouillon cubes. According to the bulletin these cubes contain little nutritive value and are greatly inferior to the home-made products.

Inasmuch as these cubes are being so extensively advertised this information is very apropos.

The average tube contains from one-half to three-fourths table salt, and as the purchaser is paying from 10 to 20 cents per ounce for these preparations, it can be readily seen that the price of table salt is a little high. The meat extract amounts from 8 to 28 per cent, according to the quality, and the vegetable extract is about the same.

The cost of the home-made bouillon is about three and one-fourth cents per cup, while the manufactured cubes come at one cent. The greater nutritive value of the home-made article, however, more than compensates for the cheapness of the prepared article.

Don't be a knocker. Hide your little hammer. What is to hinder you from speaking well of your community on all occasions? It is just as easy to tell visitors that it is composed of as good people as inhabit the earth. You will break none of the ten commandments in saying this.

The kind of men who build up a town and country and enjoy life and make the best citizens, are the enterprising, energetic and liberal men, who believe in living and letting others live; and who do not, when they get a dollar, squeeze it till the goddess of Liberty feels like she had on a corset. Such squeezing is what causes such hard times and stops the circulation of the American eagle. If it were not for our broad-gauged, enterprising men it would be impossible to build up a prosperous community.

Among the more homely but most essential accomplishments of a young woman is that of housewifery.

Mock Shrimp Salad.

One cup ground raw carrot, 1½ cups ground celery, raw (if preferred, ¼ cup ground peppers may be added), season slightly, serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

TRUE REST

Oh, God, to Thine an earnest prayer,
To give me strength that I may bear
What ere my work, where'er I stay,
Loving Father, guide the way.

Little trials, how they wear,
Little burdens hard to bear,
Tired and lonely, grieved and crushed,
At times feel humbled to the dust.

None but God can bear my cry,
Hidden from the human eye,
Oh give me power, dispel the strife,
And lead me up to higher life.

Oh, come to me in time of need,
While this childish heart doth bleed;
Yes, make me stronger day by day,
Cleaning wisdom on my way.

Now take my heart and hold it here,
As other storms are gathering near.
Yes, hold it in Thine own embrace
Until I reach that sought-for grace.

Grace that none but Thee can give,
Guide me through earth's sphere to live
The only pure and peaceful rest
That emanates from Thee, the best.
Then guide me still through life's eternal,
Where light and love shall reign.

IMMEDIATE COLD STORAGE

A HELP IN SAVING

FROSTED CITRUS

FRUITS

Washington, D. C.

"Lemons which have been frosting should be thawed gradually as the injury then will be much less than if the fruit is allowed to remain where it will thaw out rapidly." This is the conclusion which has been reached by the experts of the Department of Agriculture as a result of tests made in Southern California immediately following the frost of January 6th last.

Citrus growers have often noticed that there was less damage to their lemon crop when a cloudy morning followed a frost than when the sun came out bright and warm. In the Department's experiments on the cooling of fruit previous to shipment, no apparent damage was done to lemons even when the temperature of the cars went considerably below 32 degrees Fahrenheit.
The specialists of the Bureau of Chemistry at the Citrus By-products Laboratory in Los Angeles,
in cooperation with the Lemon Association of San Dimas, California, finally put to a practical test the theory that such part of the crop from a frosted grove as can be picked soon enough and stored in a properly cooled warehouse can be saved.

Following the severe frost of last January, a number of boxes of frosted lemons from a grove near the San Dimas packing house were gathered and stored in a room where the temperature was between 45 degrees and 50 degrees Fahrenheit. Samples of this fruit were compared each week for several months with un-frozen lemons stored under the same conditions for the same length of time and with fruit which had been left on the trees in the frosted grove. In appearance, taste, weight, acidity and quantity of juice, a large proportion of the frosted lemons which were picked and stored where they thawed gradually compared well with the unfrozen fruit.

That which was left on the trees lost juice rapidly and decreased in specific gravity and general appearance, due to an ever increasing thickness of the skin and to puffy hollow centers.

TELLS THREE-TOED HORSES'
AGE BY THEIR TEETH

A three-toed horse, no bigger than a sheep, that lived in the Mojave Desert at least a million years ago, is described for the first time by Professor John C.
Merriam in a paper just issued by the University of California. This little horse is entered in the fossil stud-book as "Parahippus mourningi."

The "Forest Horse" is another new discovery told of in the same paper. This ancient equine lived near what is now Walker Lake, in Nevada. It was as big as a colt. Dr. Merriam has christened this new sub-genus "Drymchippus."

These ancestral relatives of old Dobbin have been described from a few splintered bones and a few teeth, chiseled into view from the rock slab in which they had lain buried a matter of ten thousand centuries. But there is so much character in a single one of these ancient horse-teeth that the relationship is perfectly plain to the numerous species of American horses, which have flourished and disappeared since Miocene times, and to the horses, donkeys and zebras of today. Moreover, going back up the ages, comparison with the teeth of a tiny Eocene horse shows undeniable kinship with this vastly old doll-pony,
which was no bigger than a fox.

A few teeth are all the scientist has had, usually, from which to describe the species of horse that inhabited California in Pleistocene times. But from the wonderful asphalt-beds of Rancho La Brea have come new eleven complete and perfectly preserved
skulls of the Equus occidentalis, a horse as big as the horse of today, that roamed California, say, 250,000 years ago. In another paper just published by the University of California, Professor Merriam gives a "Preliminary Report on the Horses of Rancho La Brea," which describes foals,

adults, and old horses with teeth worn down by a life-time of chewing. Never before has such complete material been available for knowledge by any extinct American species of horse.

These Rancho La Brea horses are so much akin to fossil horses of Europe and Asia that they furnish another proof that land connection once existed between the Old World and the New. They long antedated man on the Pacific Coast, but co-existed in California with elephants, camels and the great megatherium.

Despite the fact that horses of many species lived in North and South America from Eocene to Pleistocene time, yet when Columbus landed not a horse remained in the New World. What turn or twist of evolution, what epidemic, or what climatic change killed off
the whole equine race of America is one of the puzzles science has not solved.

But at least the students of the rocks know how to tell a horse's age by its teeth, and with accuracy—say to within a quarter of a million years.

A whole mountain of earth is being sent East from California via the Southern Pacific. It is situated near Lompoc, but the state of Pennsylvania wants it and is willing to pay the price for it, so that it is being shipped a matter of three thousand miles
by rail at the rate of fifteen cents,
or seven hundred and fifty tons, a month. When the last car has gone out an accurate indication will be had of what a mountain actually weighs.

The earth is of a very peculiar consistency, and is supposed to be the result of gradual decomposition for ages past of millions of sea shells. For commercial use, the only process it goes through is grinding. It is sold in the East as infusorial earth, and has high value for insulating purposes in the electrical industry.

The grain of the earth is exceedingly fine and there is no grit, so that much of it finds its way into jewelers' shops as a polish. In weight, it is very light and fluffs like feathers. The color is white.

What other uses will be developed for this California mountain are a matter of conjecture. Many uses are being found for it daily.
The supply at Lompoc is of large dimensions, handily located along the tracks of the Southern Pacific on the branch that runs from the coast line at Surf. As yet the principal demand is in Pennsylvania, but there is no doubt that a market for it will develop in other Eastern and Middle West centers and on the Pacific coast.

Reclamation of sand hills that is saving for the state of California a large area of valuable farming land is being accomplished by the Southern Pacific along the ocean shore on its Coast line near Goleta. Incidentally, this work is a part of the company's "safety-first" activity, for it secures the shifting sand along the right of way and makes the roadbed solid and permanent.

The history of Golden Gate park in San Francisco is being repeated, and what was once a barren waste of sand dunes is now becoming covered with useful trees and plants. From the San Francisco park commission a certain variety of grass is obtained which takes root and grows rapidly. As it spreads and mats, the ground beneath is sheltered from the whirling ocean winds and held firmly together, in good shape for later planting with less hardy vegetation.

This work has been done for many miles along the Southern Pacific line and will be extended as time permits. It takes about three years for the grass to spread completely and prepare the soil for agriculture. The sand of itself is fertile enough. The drawback now is that vegetation cannot get a hold before it is caught up by the gales and carried away from the roots.
